Object, Textile, Ceramic, Installation Art

Eight years ago, I happened to come across aluminum coffee capsules and was immediately impressed by this material. I particularly appreciate the metallic colors, the ease and simplicity of processing, and the weather resistance. However, as a geographer, I also see the possibility of questioning the use of such a valuable material as a coffee container. That is why a number of works address the destruction of our environment through bauxite mining and also the impact of aluminum on the human body.

CHARACTERS WITH HUMOR

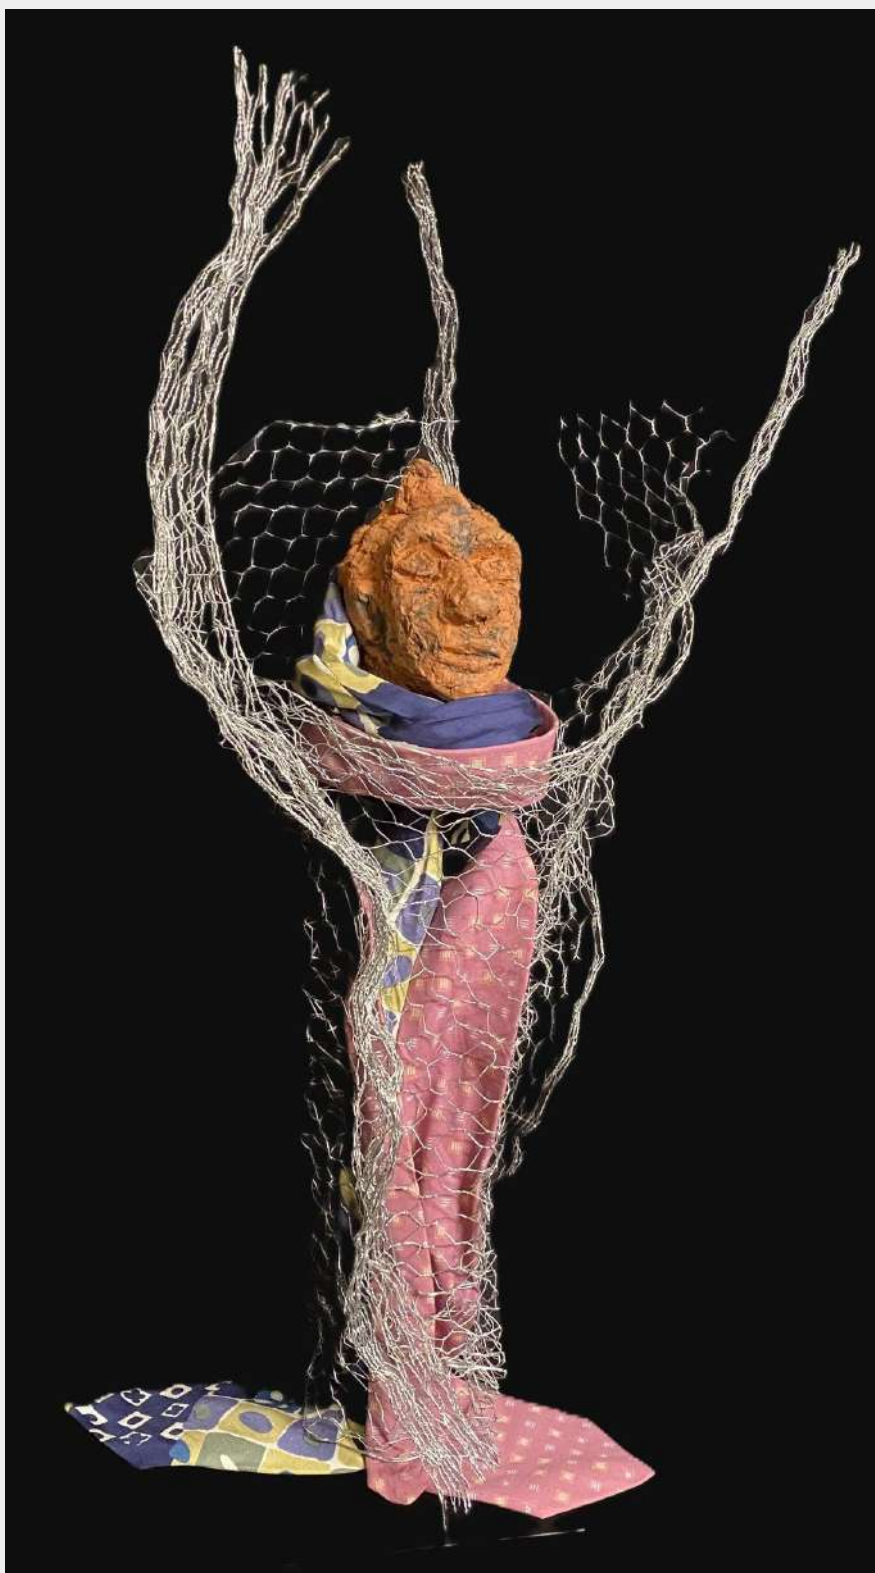

I am often asked how I came to associate these friendly, extraordinary characters with wire and ties of all things.

The tie is considered an essential decorative element of male clothing in the Western world. However, they are increasingly losing their original use and significance. Men are wearing them less and less frequently.

Here, I breathe new life into them: they are less intended as part of traditional male attire and more as essential parts of the “human” physiognomy: one can recognize impressions of arms, legs, and items of clothing. The interplay between the wire frame and ties suggests movement: dancing, sweeping, expansive.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank my visitors, who were able to assign human emotions to the individual “characters with humor.” I have gladly adopted these suggested titles here.

We are the champions!

Drowned Dreams

What a fascinating discovery: with simple, wide, transparent tape, you can actually create fragile, mysteriously shiny, reflective, semi-transparent, small and even large-format objects!!!

The feather-light tape objects created in this way can be filled ("the three graces"), sewn and crocheted ("and yet beautiful"), hung up ("drowned dreams") and wrapped ("Adam and Eve").

...and yet beautiful...

TEXTILE ART

Folded pictures

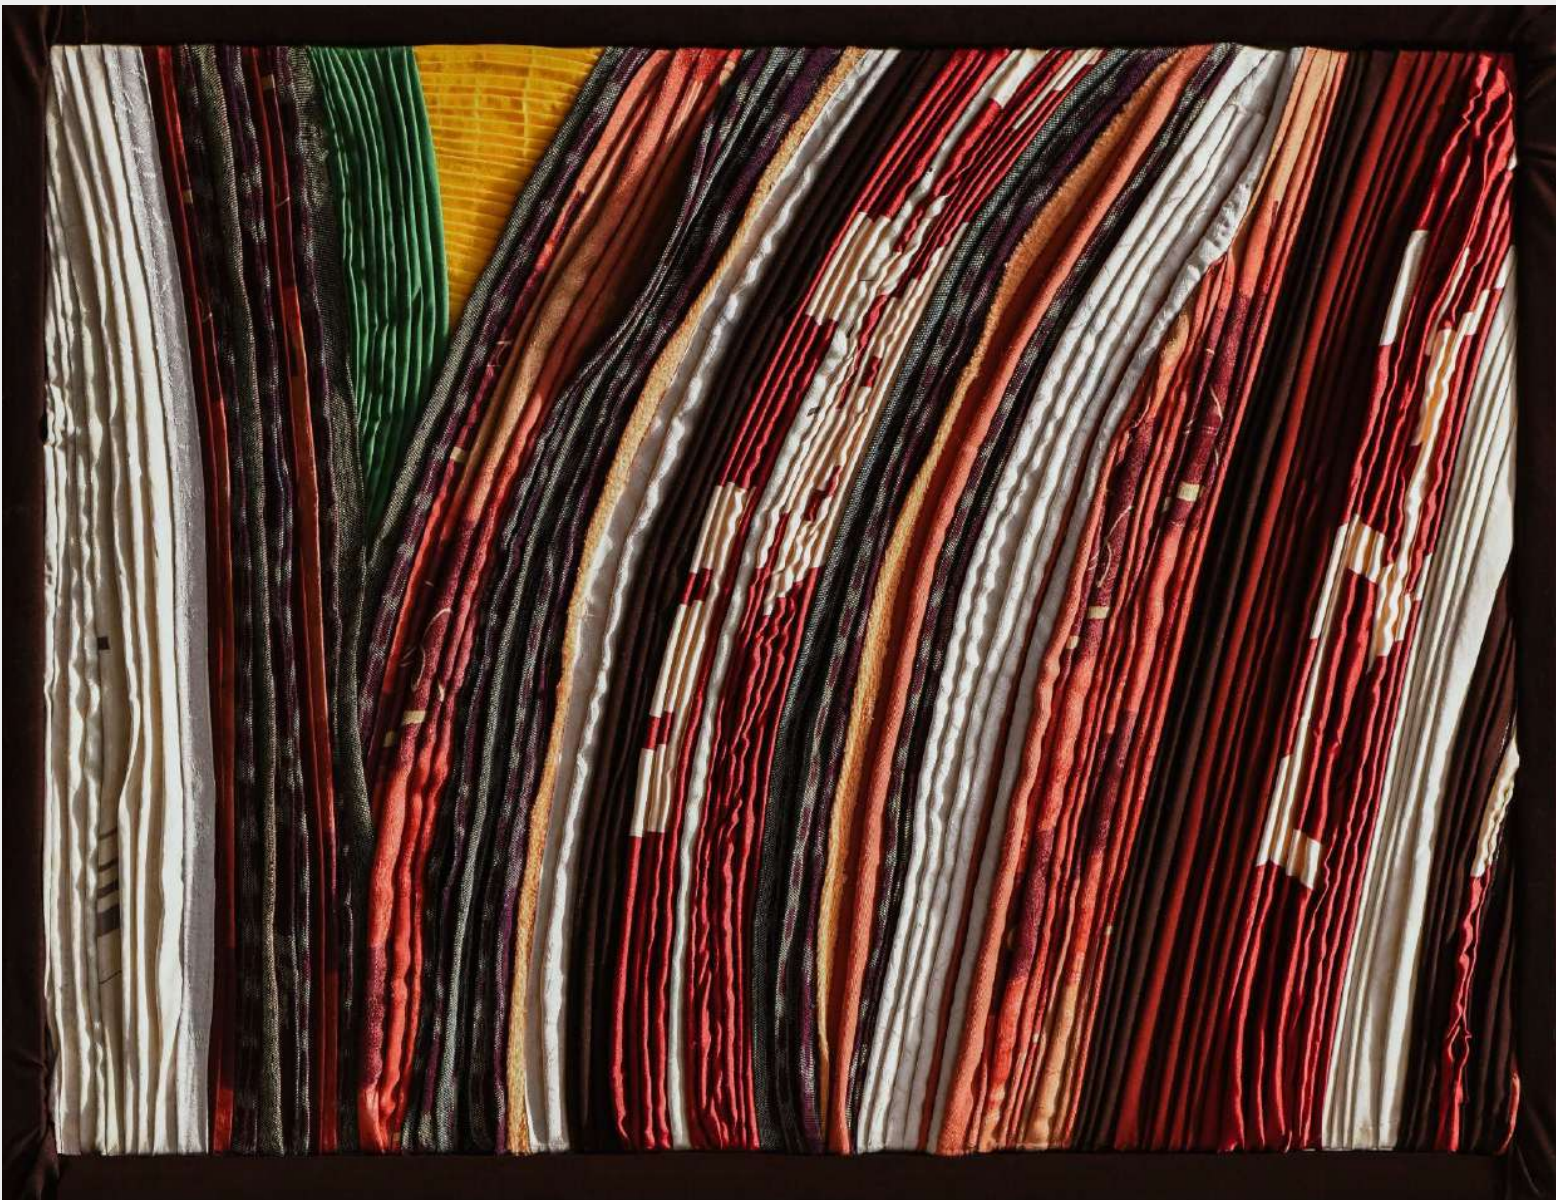

Material: used fabrics, yarns, wooden frames, filling material

Description: The fabrics vary in consistency and material Color: mostly solid red and white tones, occasionally with patterns, a small yellow triangle - in the folds: - differently padded – arranged in varying rhythms in vertical arcs - with the exception of the small yellow triangle at the top of the “Sunrise” object. Here, the folds are tighter, smaller, and arranged horizontally.

Intended message: movement and time

The rhythm and arrangement of the folds mimic the coming and going of waves, creating an impression of movement.

“Sunrise” adds the aspect of time of day.

FOLDING + SEWING OBJECTS

Description: Fabrics are stretched onto a wooden frame and arranged in various rhythmic vertical or horizontal folds. Some also have “holes.” Some fabrics are decorated with acrylic paints, some come from discarded clothing. The folds are then stitched over in places to make them transparent. In places, I pull the fabric up into the sewing plane.

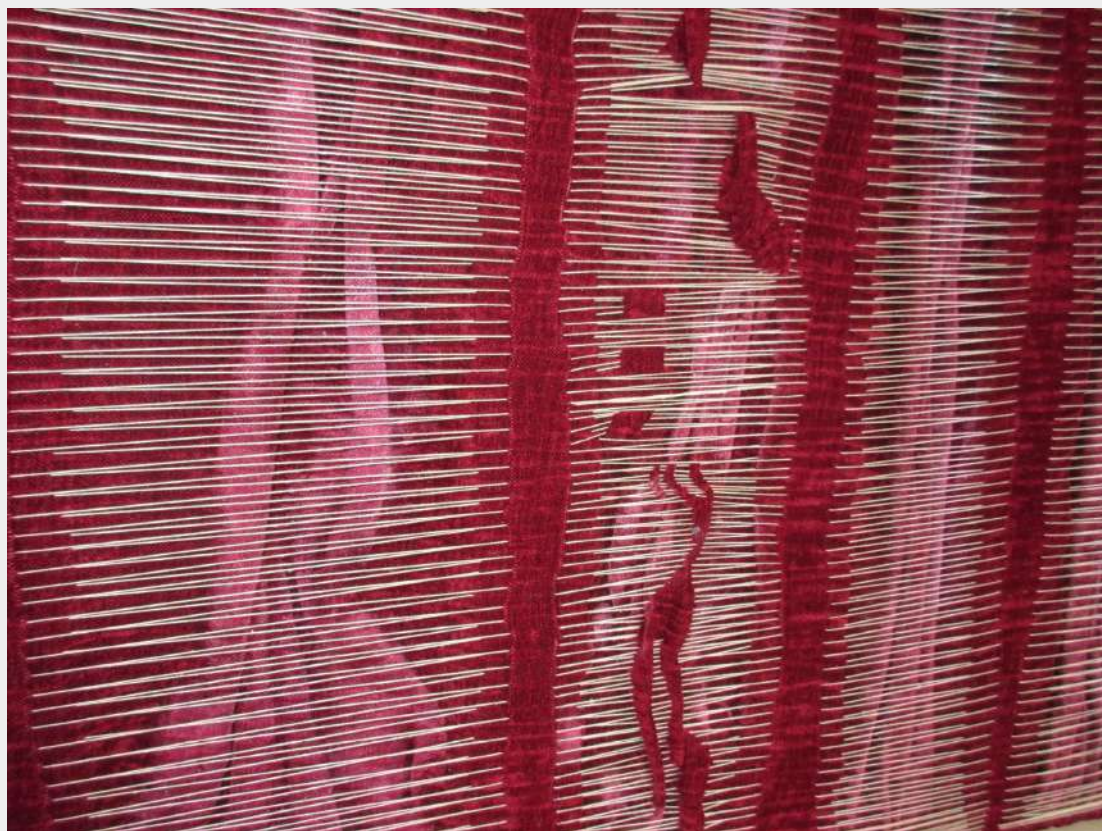

Intended message: I am referring to the phases of our lives, relating the visible fabric layer to the present, and the folds to our past. Looking through the sewing layer would be like looking into the part of our past that has shaped us so much that it will continue to be significant in our lives today and in the future. The pieces of fabric that rise from the “past” rise above the sewing level into the present could represent the future. The individual stitches resemble a string of pearls, and thus a precious treasure from our past. When the viewer moves in front of the artwork, the folds and threads, the lighting conditions, the shadows, etc. “move” with them.

CROCHETED OBJECTS

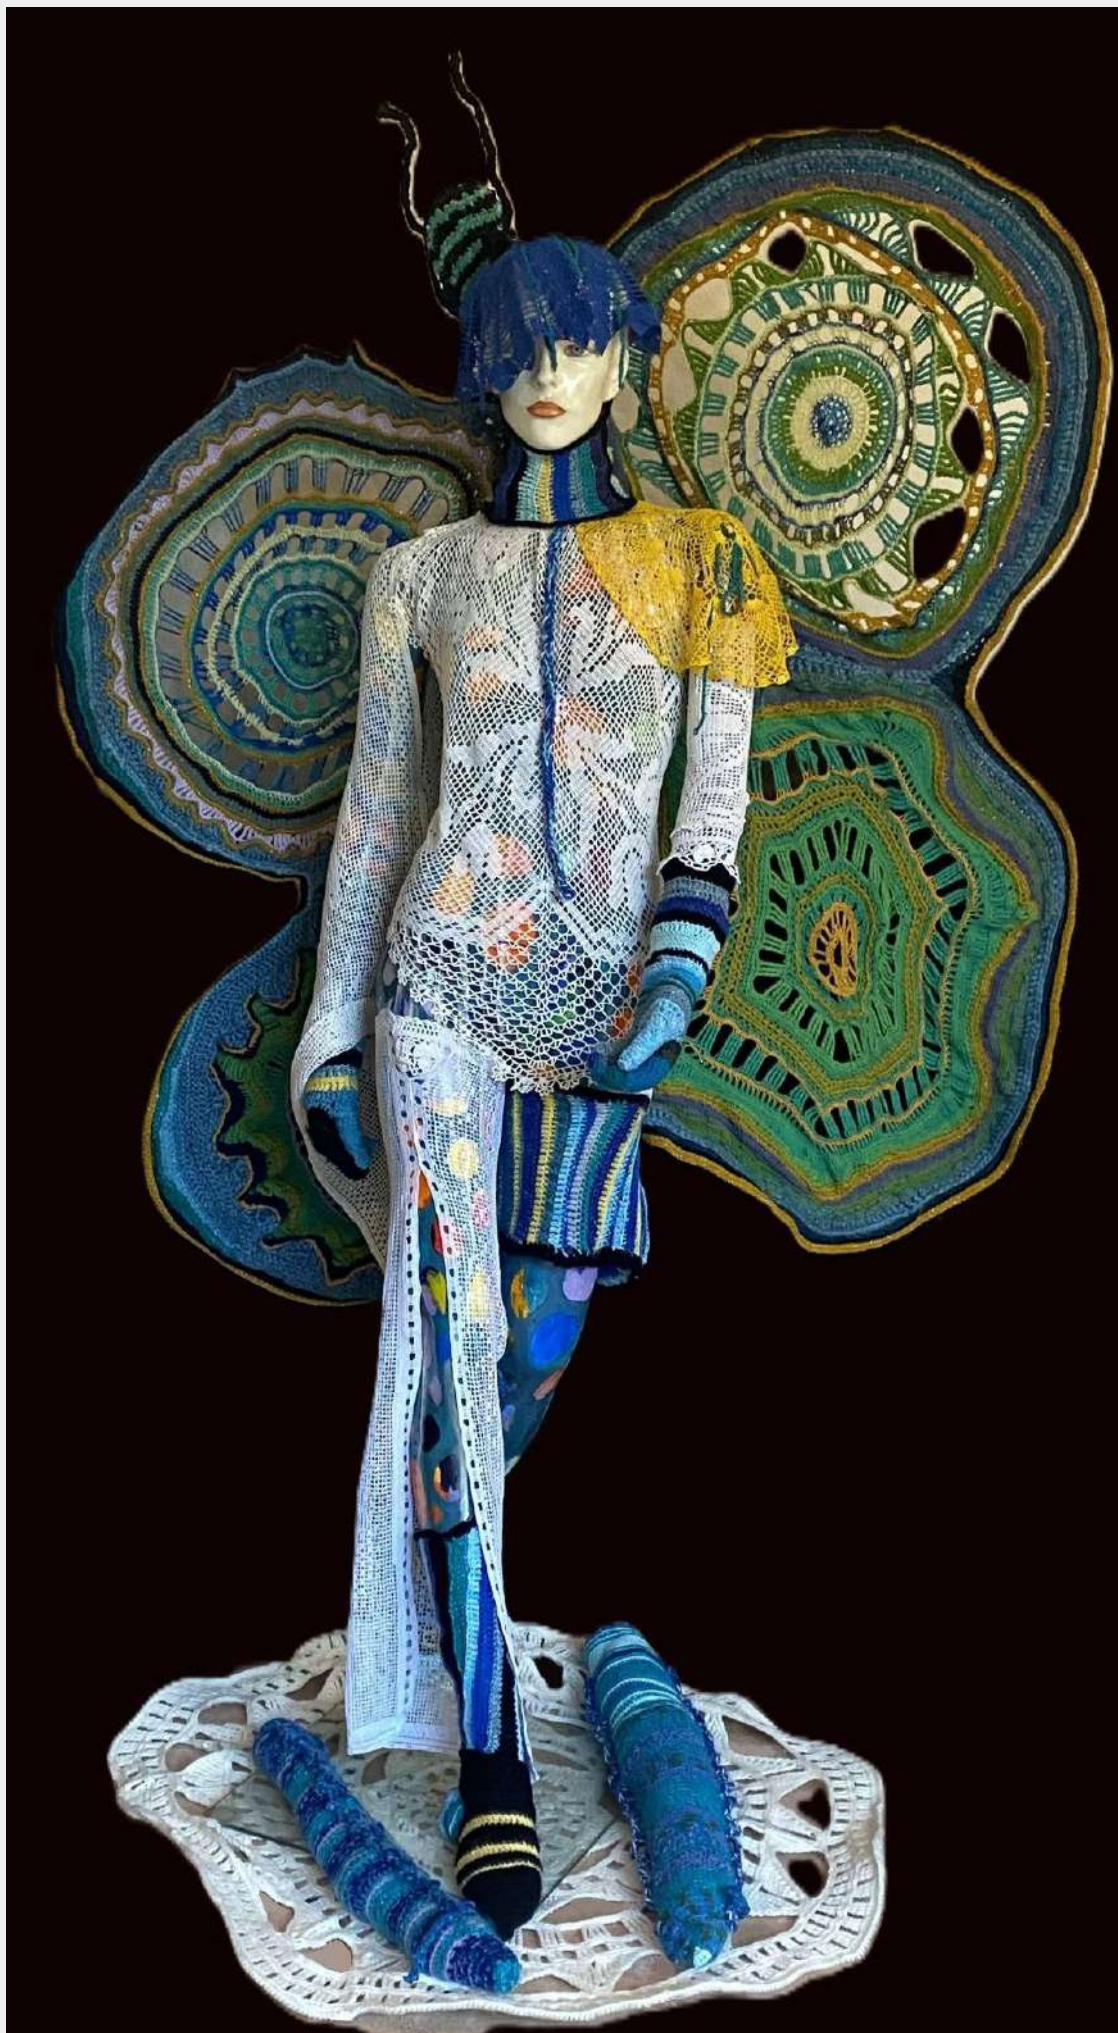

It's amazing what can be designed in color first and then also "crocheted"... e.g., cages, animal figures, human busts, even mannequins.

One topic that plays an important role for me is:

Butterflies: symbols of joie de vivre, lightness, transformation, and colorfulness.

But: Butterflies cannot be locked up, they die if you do...
